Manager's Comment

Markets remained quiet in May despite strong economic data. The PMI index for services and for the non-manufacturing sector reached their highest levels ever, at 70.40 and 64.00, respectively. Inflation rose to 4.2% year-over-year (y/y) in April, an increase of 0.8% month-over-month, above expectations (0.2%). This data surprised the FED and the market, suggesting that a reduction in bond purchases should be considered at future meetings. For Q1 2021, companies in the S&P 500 reported an earnings growth rate of 51.9%, the highest since 2010 (55.4%). Exchange-traded funds with a Europe focus reported their largest inflows since 2015, with approximately $5.6B added as of May 27.

In this context, the technology component was reduced from 71% to 51% (-20%). The Robotics & AI strategy was overhauled, increasing the European component from 4% to 6% total, decreasing the sectors of cyber security (from 11% to 9%), Internet Software & Services (from 6% to 5%), Software (from 29% to 22%), increasing the healthcare-med tech sector (from 8% to 12). The e-Payment sector entered the strategy at 6%. The total equity component at the end of the month is about 57%. Equity hedges between 10% and 20% were executed, taking advantage of technical market structures and lowering the equity component on high volatility days, and currency hedges were executed on EUR/USD at 50% to mitigate risks and benefit from the dollar's depreciation to levels between 1.21 and 1.22.

At the moment, we continue to focus on well-diversified portfolios, both in terms of geography and asset class (by increasing the European equity component, for example), favoring primarily quality stocks. The earning season has so far shown positive signs in terms of earnings and turnover growth: it is clear that these above-average growth rates are due to a combination of higher earnings based on a recovery, albeit slow, of the economies and a comparison with weaker earnings in 2020 due to the negative impact of the pandemic. However, we expect positive results for both this for remaining quarters of 2021 driven primarily by an accelerating economic recovery.
