Manager's Comment

Inflation, supply chain bottlenecks, the spread of the Delta variant and semiconductor shortages didn't dampen markets that continued to post record performances during the month: S&P500 rose +2.90%, Nasdaq 100 +4.16%, EURO STOXX 50 +2.62%. 10Y Treasury yields rose in August from a low of 1.17% to close at 1.30% at the end of the month. J. Powell's calm and reassuring "dovish" attitude at the Jackson Hole Symposium pleased investors, allowing the US indices to close at new all-time highs. The Federal Reserve Chairman's speech was consistent with his very gradual and measured approach, refraining from taking new paths and providing operational details on the next steps in monetary policy, leaving out the hypothesis of the start of tapering "by the end of the year", rather than from September, as investors had expected.

In this context, no changes were made to the asset allocation and the total equity component at the end of the month was approximately 45%, divided into the following strategies: 33% Best Brands, 8% Biotech, 4% Healthcare Revolution. Equity hedging operations were carried out between 10 and 20%, lowering the equity component in the days close to the Fed meeting where there would be a less accommodating and favorable comment for equities. Surprised by the Fed chairman's speech, we partially closed our futures operations to hedge at a loss. Finally, currency hedging operations were carried out on EUR / USD at 100% to mitigate the risks and benefit from the depreciation of the dollar at levels between 1.19 and 1.17.

Earnings season draws to a close with 89% of companies in the S&P500 reporting results that surprised Wall Street estimates. The game will be played on guidance for the third quarter of the year. Fears about the Delta variant roll-out and inflation could continue to bother markets, despite stocks hitting record highs in August. The next driver is definitely the Fed's timing on tapering: we expect a gradual and slow start of tapering in order to gauge the still ongoing drivers such as the Delta variant, inflation and employment growth. While investors are celebrating this accommodative stance by Powell, we need to continuously monitor the numbers and data on the health of the economy to avoid monetary policy missteps.
